Mount Vernon Avenue—The Claims of Alexandria.

Now that Congress has made an ample appropriation for the survey of a route for the proposed "avenue" to Mount Vernon we think the citizens of Alexandria will do well to take timely measures to insure the selection of Washington street of their city as a section of the great national highway. Alexandria was emphatically Washington's town. He had ever an abiding interest in its growth and prosperity, and it contains A SPECIALTY.

Novelties in Dress Trimmings, Buttons, Ribbons, Laces Embroideries, Hosiery and Gloves.
Have received another let of MATTINGS and OIL, CLOTHS at very low figures.

An early call will convince all that we are leaders in low prices.

Its growth and prosperity, and it contains many objects which are intimately associated with and which remind of his honoring presence and perpetuate fond remembrances of him. Here he voted and came for his farm supplies. Here he attended public worship and here he commenced his great military career. So, it would seem eminentthe national capital with his home and last resting place should traverse the street which he laid out and which bears his name. Not to secure, if possible, this important ob ject and to allow by neglect of timely and well directed efforts the coad to pass by a route a mile or more west of the limits of the old town, with its many interesting his-toric land marks, merely to subserve the private interests of combinations and syndi-cates, would be a mistake forever after to be deplored, not only by the people of Alexandria but by all ravellers.

This road was not proposed as a speculative venture in any sense of the term. Congress did not make their liberal appropriation for its survey to merely enrich any individual or corporation, and there should be no such unwarranted perversions of plans and purposes, as are sought to be made, as everybody is interested in having a broad, well graded and smooth highway for easy and expeditious travel, worthy alike of the great personage whose revered name and fame it is designed to commemorate, the American people who are to construct it and the throngs of wayfarers from all climes of the earth who will in the generations to come passoverit. So we think every body should be has much interested in having it laid so as not only to command sights of as many as possible of the old colonial and other historic land marks of the intervening country, particularly of such as are linked with the life of the first President, but also to secure the most attractive views of natural scenery.

Washington street has a width of 100 feet. It is almost level from end to end and would be a mile of the road bed already constructed and fit for travel without cos to the government. It is well built with sightly dwellings and would give the wayfarer a view of old Carist Church where Washington was a frequent attendant.
With the national capital, which is fast be coming, through the munificent provisions of successive Congresses, one of the finest and most attractive cities of the world, Alexandria ought to be connected by a grand roadway or boulevard equal to that of Pennsylvania avenue. Such a boulevard would naturally attract to the building by capitalists along its entire course of handsome residences with beautiful surroundings, and be the means of bringing to our old Virginia town a large influx of permanent dwellers and visitors. So much, briefly, in regard to the route of the first half or division of the avenue. In regard to the route of the lower half or division from Alexandria to Mount Vernon, we think there can be but one opin-ion with competent judges, whether they be practical engineers or not, after the lay of the land shall have been carefully looked over and all the topographical features are fully considered.

At the southern terminus of Washington street lies Great Hunting creek, an arm of the Potomac. This stream has there a chan nel of less than a hundred yards in width, and might be spanned by a memorial bridge and a beautiful connection be made with the opposite Virginia shore. From Hunting creek on down to Mount Vernon, a distance of seven miles, a route has already been surveyed and mapped out by Mr. J. E. Sickels, the chief of the sur-veyors of the "Association" which, while it is very direct, and lies over nearly level and sufficiently elevated lands, abounding in sand, gravel, and rubble for the construction of the road, affords an almost continuous view of the Potomac and passes through four miles of the old Mount Vernon posses

A dozen different routes might be selected for the Avenue and by each one of them a broad, hard and smooth wheeling surface could be constructed, but beside these es sentials, important as they are, something more is desirable for this great "National Memorial Highway." Its way unquestion ably should lie so as to afford to the curious multitudes of wayfarers who will throng it from all the regions of the earth, sights of as many historic landmarks as possible of the great chieftain who is to be honored by the enterprise, and of as many pleasing views of diversified natural and rural scenery as can be commanded. If these desirable features can be combined with easy hard smooth wheelgradiants and broad, hard, smooth, wheeling surface, we shall have a highway delightful to the traveller and creditable to the munificence of our national govern-ment.
